Session Descriptions

Opening General Session: Owning the Mission of True Palliative Care - Transitioning from Preadolescence to Maturity

Timothy G. Ihrig, MD, CEO, Ihrig MD & Associates, Des Moines, IA

Dr. Ihrig explores what is possible in caring for the seriously ill through examination of what he terms true palliative care. He discusses combining a visionary approach to care delivery through a unique philosophical perspective modeled into methodology that can be strategically implemented into any healthcare system to meet the needs of patients, systems and payers. In addition, he addresses the current 'state of affairs' of palliative and hospice integration, acceptance and growth. A voluminous number of palliative programs have been developed over the past ten years, many predicated on the belief of easy financial capitalization on end-of-life care in a fee-for-service environment. Against this backdrop, he details how these programs have, and continue to, perpetuate biases and ignorance about the field among healthcare professionals, administration, laypersons and the media, which has led to a chasm between palliative care and hospice.

Dr. Ihrig offers that we are at a crucial inflection point in the development and integration of these models and will share thoughts on why it is imperative for us to embrace a broader definition of what is, can and should be the power of this care. He challenges us to expand our view of palliative care and hospice as a unified mechanism for LIVING our entire lives, death being not the opposite of life, but the culmination of living a life.

Opioids in End of Life Care: Relieving Suffering Ethically and Safely

Garrett Snipes, MD, Regional Hospice Program Director, Fellowship in Hospice and Palliative Medicine, Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System, Spartanburg, SC

While the opioid misuse epidemic is real, it is to some extent due to the inappropriate extrapolation of the practice of opioid use in patients at end of life to the population with chronic non-malignant pain. This session will outline the ethical imperative to relieve suffering in people nearing death, and the role of opioids in that regard. Using the bedrock ethical principles, Dr. Snipes will review ethical considerations in using opioids in this population in order to achieve maximal benefit and minimal burden, and facilitate a comfortable end of life process in advanced cancer and other serious illness states.

Hospital and Community Collaborations That Enhance Advance Care Planning Conversations

Adam Koontz, Corporate Manager of Advance Care Planning, Novant Health Inc., Winston-Salem, NC

Dr. Mendelson: Advance care planning and goals of care conversations are essential to providing person-centered care across the healthcare continuum. Our patients deserve the care that aligns with their values and preferences, no more and no less, however many providers and members of a person's care team find it difficult to discuss this important topic. As we work to increase our comfort level with this topic, we hope to normalize this conversation, both in the community and throughout the course of a person's healthcare experience.

Adam Koontz: At Novant Health, Choices and Champions is all about knowing and honoring patients' wishes to ensure they receive the care they want – no more, no less. Built on a foundation of team member awareness, we have transformed the culture around how we engage patients to discuss and document their end-of-life wishes. Our approach utilizes tools and strategies that empower all adult patients to identify their health care Champion – someone they trust to speak for them if they are unable to make their own medical decisions – and to engage in thoughtful conversations around their goals of care and treatment preferences. All of this is documented in the patient's electronic medical record, empowering team members in both the acute and ambulatory settings to revisit these conversations throughout the care continuum. By normalizing these conversations and ensuring their documentation, we increase the likelihood that our patients will receive the care they desire.

A Palliative Approach to Alzheimer's Disease and Dementia

Allison Jordan, MD, Regional Medical Director of Palliative Medicine Services, Christian Hospital and Alton Memorial Hospice & Associate Medical Director, BJC Hospice, St. Louis, MO

The United States is facing a "Silver Tsunami" of individuals that will need advanced illness management. Many will develop Alzheimer's disease and/or dementia during their lifetime. Palliative care providers must be prepared to support the patients and families along the journey. This session will discuss current best practices for symptom management and advance care planning. Tips for caregiver support will also be addressed.

Palliative Care: A Payer's Perspective

John Smith, MD, CPC, Lead Medical Director, Quality Based Networks, Blue Cross Blue Shield of NC, Durham, NC

Dr. Smith will discuss the approach that BCBSNC is taking regarding Palliative Care.

When the Shoe Doesn't Fit: Providing Pediatric Palliative Care in an Adult Hospice World

Lily Gillmor, BSN, RN, CHPPN, Transitions Kids Program Director, Transitions LifeCare, Raleigh, NC

While uncomfortable to talk about, the fact remains that children experience life threatening and/or life limiting illnesses, with many of these children not living into adulthood. The trajectory of a chronic complex medical condition in a pediatric patient looks different than in an adult, requiring an extra level of expertise from providers. This session will define pediatric palliative care and address the similarities and differences between pediatric palliative and pediatric hospice. We will also look at how incorporating even minor aspects of pediatric palliative care into everyday practice, regardless of setting, can have a tremendous impact on the patient, family, and you.

Value-Based Care Driven by Technology

Steve Hendrix, President, LifeScience Technologies, Leawood, KS & John Carreker, III, CEO, Curantis Solutions, Addison, TX

As the healthcare industry moves to a value-based care model, technology will play an ever increasing role. In this session, two technology leaders will provide a couple of use case scenarios, while introducing you to their healthcare delivery platforms.

Closing Plenary: Storyboard Interactive Sharing Session on "Innovative Care Delivery and Community Partnership

This closing plenary is a roundtable session in which participants will interact in small groups with various presenters to hear about innovative and exciting care delivery models and/or diverse community programs. Presenters will share what they are doing as a best practice in their organization/community/region - a care delivery model, a community partnership program, a research project - something that is or will enhance care delivery for patients and their families across the advanced illness care continuum.
