Chronic Pain Management in Hospice Patients

Robin Turner, MD, Medical Director of Duke Homecare and Hospice, Duke University Health System, Durham, NC

Pain is the hallmark symptom of the hospice patient. Chronic pain is a public health issue and the most common reason for physician visits in non-hospice patients. Opioids are the mainstay of pain treatment in hospice and non-hospice patients. How do hospice providers/organizations implement safe opioid prescribing practices while ensuring excellent symptom management? Prescribing opioids for pain and dyspnea management requires a partnership between the prescriber and the patient. The learner will be able to discuss the challenges of managing patients with chronic pain who are admitted to hospice. Additionally, the learner will be able to outline some approaches to safe opioid prescribing in these patients, as well as generalizing some of these practices to the hospice population.

How to Increase your Palliative Care Reimbursement

John Morris, MD, FAAHPM, Chief Medical Officer Palliative Care, Catawba Regional Hospice and Teleios Collaborative Network, Flat Rock, NC

The need for palliative care services continues to grow. People with serious illness need access to valuable community based palliative care services. Yet palliative care can be expensive to provide in the community. In this session we will talk about some strategies we use to maximize reimbursement for community palliative care so that programs are able to serve more people. The session will focus on maximizing billing and coding with new codes for use by community providers. We will also discuss other strategies to improve efficiency and revenue.

Tips for Practical & Compliant Emergency Preparedness

Will Moorhead, JD, All Clear Emergency Management Group, LLC, Raleigh, NC

The new Centers for Medicaid and Medicare guidelines for emergency preparedness require organizations to meet assessment, planning, training, and exercise standards. Although the standards are similar among provider types, much of the material and activity supporting implementation of this rule has not focused on the unique challenges of hospice and home care. Applying the CMS standards in hospice and home care organizations requires understanding of how these organizations operate, as well as an understanding of best practices in healthcare emergency management. Many of these organizations continue to grapple with balancing compliance with a practical application of the rule that can be beneficial to their emergency preparedness activities and the organization as a whole. This webinar will focus on "how" hospice and home care organizations can approach each of the four emergency preparedness requirements by examining emergency plans and exercises, and how each relates to risk assessment and training. Most importantly, it will focus on maximizing the preparedness effort to benefit the organization's operational activities.

August 15

Updates in Alzheimer's and Dementia Care

Allison Jordan, MD, Associate Medical Director, BJC Medical Group, Saint Louis, MO

Palliative care and hospice agencies are facing an increase in patients with Alzheimer's disease and dementia. Staff and clinicians need additional training on how to care for this unique population and support their caregivers. This session will discuss the latest data on best practices for agencies to implement in their care of patients with dementia.

September 26

Community Engagement That Matters

Marisette Hasan, BSN, RN, President/CEO, The Carolinas Center, Columbia, SC

The majority of hospice and palliative care organizations are working diligently to serve as many people as possible living with an advanced or serious illness in their respective communities. However meaningful care delivery for these patients will not happen as quickly as needed with individual organizations working alone, but with intentional community engagement and partnerships. This webinar will discuss the barriers that hinder meaningful community engagement and highlight healthcare and community opportunities that can make a difference in the communities we serve. "What I try to tell young people is that if you come together with a mission, and its grounded with love and a sense of community, you can make the impossible possible."

Professional Boundaries: Protecting You and the Clients You Serve

Melissa Coursey, MSW, LCSW & Ric Durham, Jr., M.Div., BCC, Spiritual Care Director, Hospice & Palliative Care of Cabarrus County, Kannapolis, NC

When providing end of life care, healthcare professionals are particularly susceptible to boundary concerns. Understanding the importance of healthy boundaries and recognizing the negative outcomes of boundary violations is crucial to ensuring the best quality of care for Hospice recipients, as well as combatting compassion fatigue. In this session, we will explore the importance of healthy boundaries in the professional/client relationship. We will discuss the potential outcomes of boundary concerns. We will also explore the difference between a "boundary crossing" versus a "boundary violation". Practical tips for maintaining a therapeutic relationship with the clients we serve will be provided.
